Fr. Jaeger

Impact Day '66
February 16

If we are to give in the measure of our love—and this is the Gospel Standard—then what we must give today cannot be the unripe fruit of a lukewarm love, whatever that may be. The stage is set on a world wide scale: the issues at stake are profound and far-reaching; the action required must proceed from the strongest impulses of grace. If we are to play our several parts effectively in this historic drama we shall need a veritable outpouring of the Spirit of love and a ready will to respond.

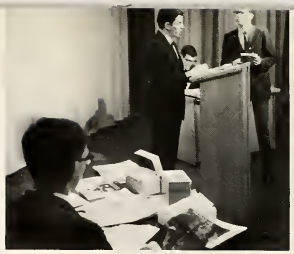
ROMEO AND JULIET



My source?

It is interesting to note that Christ began his public ministry at a party, and at a good one. The Gospel speaks of six water jars holding fifteen to twenty-five gallons. We might say that Christ understood the principle that "Parties make the world go round." But, and this is the point, he used the party as a time of renewal and went forth to do his job. He walked the hills and plains of Palastine both when it was interesting and when it was deadly boring, and he walked right up to the fulfillment of his vocation--to the cross.

Like no other society ever had, we have a party problem today. But the problem can be a challenge if we use our leisure, like Christ, for the renewal needed to better go forth to face the problems confronting man today. We need to remember that it is not at the party after the basketball game or after the class play or at the end of the senior year that the game is won, the play produced, the man made, but in total effort--in the cross.

CAPITAL MAN

The world today is a balloon of progress that steadily expands in all fields of developement and change. The man who lives in the world has to expand with it or he's lost. The man who is going to have to carry the ball in this world has an expanding task--to move with it and make it grow in a full perspective of Christian love and understanding.

An awareness of the world and its problems in relation to God must be the number one requirement for tomorrow's priest. The priest is going to have to know why kids go out drinking and then let that "bombed" look become their chief trait for a superiority complex. He's got to be capable of getting to the root of the problems--problems that are going to be far reaching with the new breed. And yet the priest's work is not soley one of dealing with problems--he has to know and fully realize that Christ is in everyone; and he, as another Christ, must become a working, active, truly spiritual constituent of each and every individual.

The Council projected the priest onto the world screen and even put him in technicolor--now he's got to go out and earn his Oscar. There will be no backing-down for the priest of tomorrow.

THAT'S ALL

HALLS

Much is said today about initiative, responsibility, experience, maturity, leadership, and self-expression. You have even heard much about these concepts right here. In fact the juniors and seniors often tire of having to exercise leadership and responsibility.

But the cold fact is that life demands discipline, and to leave you with any other impression would be disastrously misleading. Discipline is something from which we can never run. The real leader is a man of discipline. There is such a thing as an over-emphasis upon discipline and there is actual misuse of discipline, but that cannot cloud its value. It is the disciplined but spirited team that wins, not the bearded beatniks on the side lines. It is policy here to emphasize responsibility, maturity, leadership, even initiative, experience and self expression, but within the framework of discipline normal in a good home where there is a healthy balance between genuine concern for the individual and a real respect for society.

True discipline has but one purpose: to help us rise above the hold that self has upon us in order that we might rise to the love of God and neighbor as ourselves. And in the final analysis, responsibility, experience, initiative, leadership, and maturity have no other purpose either. Fr. Stan Grabowicz
